Project Description/Justification:

During detailed design it became obvious that the drainage crossing required to lengthen the runway would cost significantly more than anticipated. Also the advent of GPS instrument approaches require more airspace. In order to allow for better approaches it was necessary to realign the runway and reconfigure the apron. This runway is short with a number of airspace obstructions. By rotating the alignment the approach over the community is improved, obstructions are mitigated and a length of 4,000' can be achieved.
