PCN 1249, formerly located Palmer office was funded through interagency receipts provided by the Department of Public Safety's Multi-Jurisdictional Task Force drug enforcement grant. On Oct 31, 2000, funding for the Palmer position was discontinued. The FY 2001 Criminal Division budget included additional general funds in the Criminal Justice Litigation component. A portion of those funds are transferred to the Third Judicial District Anchorage to focus on alcohol prosecution. The remainder of the funding for this position are sought through the agency's participation in the in the Drug Court Project: The Criminal Division participated in a drug court planning project with the court system, law enforcement, the Public Defender Agency, and the Department of Corrections. A drug court is a program that is designed to supervise non-violent felony offenders who commit drug offenses or drug-related offenses (such as theft to support a drug addiction). A half-time prosecutor will be assigned to a drug court that is being established in Anchorage in early 2001 with federal funds. The goals of drug court include: reducing criminal offenses committed by drug- and alcohol-addicted person, reducing costs associated with re-arrest and confinement, introducing offenders to an ongoing process of recovery designed to achieve abstinence from intoxicants, and improving conditions for the children of addicted offender.

Alcohol is at the root of a number of problems in Alaska. The correlation between alcohol and crime is significant, and alcohol is related to a number of accidental deaths and injuries. In addition, many children are born with FAS or FAE because their mothers consumed alcohol during pregnancy.

Proposal: It is the intent of this proposal to significantly reduce violent crime, accidental deaths and the incidence of FAS and FAE by cutting off the easy availability of alcohol through aggressive investigation and prosecution of bootlegging offenses. The project will be a joint effort between the Departments of Public Safety and Law. Two troopers will be placed in Bethel, one trooper in Nome, one trooper in Kotzebue and two troopers at the Anchorage International Airport. These troopers will aggressively investigate bootlegging in and into the bush. They will work closely with local law enforcement agencies and the United States Postal Service. A new prosecutor position will be located in Bethel to handle prosecution of bootlegging in the Bethel region. A prosecutor in Anchorage will obtain cross-designation as an Assistant United States Attorney to obtain federal search warrants to search packages shipped via the US mail, to handle the prosecutions in Anchorage, Nome and Kotzebue, to provide legal advice during investigations, and to respond to motions and appeals in bootlegging cases. In addition, money is requested for a paralegal in the Bethel District Attorney's Office to handle subpoenas, witness travel and other tasks. A federal grant available in FY 2002 in the amount of $1.4 million has been awarded to fund year one of this project. Of that amount $500.0 funds the prosecution effort. The availability of continuing funds in subsequent years is not yet known. This increment funds an additional prosecutor and related costs in Anchorage. (Also see Fourth Judicial District)

Alcohol is at the root of a number of problems in Alaska. The correlation between alcohol and crime is significant, and alcohol is related to a number of accidental deaths and injuries. In addition, many children are born with FAS or FAE because their mothers consumed alcohol during pregnancy. A full narrative of this project is included with the increment for this purpose in the Third Judicial District-Anchorage Governor's amended budget proposal for FY 2002.

A federal grant available in FY 2002 in the amount of $1.4 million has been awarded to fund year one of this project. Of that amount $500.0 funds the prosecution effort. The availability of continuing funds in subsequent years is not yet known. This increment funds an additional prosecutor, paralegal and related costs in Bethel.

FY 2001 Criminal Justice Litigation budget included additional general funds in the amount of $250.0 added to the contractual line. A portion of these funds is transferred to Third Judicial District Anchorage to provide the general fund portion of PCN 1249. These funds will allow increased focus on alcohol prosecution in the Anchorage area.

Victims' rights laws and the Victims' Rights Constitutional Amendment require the prosecutor's office to notify victims of numerous court proceedings and other matters. In addition, mandatory arrest laws and aggressive prosecution of domestic violence cases have increased the domestic violence caseload across the state. Nine out of thirteen prosecutors' offices have one or more victim-witness coordinators who have a broad range of responsibility to victims and to witnesses. However, the sheer volume is beyond the capacity of the victim-witness coordinators to handle. In the Criminal Division, a volunteer coordinator was hired to initiate volunteer programs in District Attorney Offices. The coordinator recruits and trains volunteers to assist victim-witness coordinators in providing notification to victims and assisting with documentation for restitution. Each local coordinator is paid a stipend and provided training through the program. In order to continue the volunteer program, the Criminal Division is requesting a combination of interagency funding to provide for the RSA relationship through 9/30/2001, and general funds to continue the program for the remainder of 2002. Total funds requested are $156.7.

The Victim Restitution Project funding would allow the Collections Unit to handle the collection of restitution on behalf of crime victims. The Unit currently has a collections database which provides a method for efficient and streamlined collection of debts owed to the State. With some modifications, this database and related collections procedures could be used to collect restitution on behalf of victims. Currently, the Unit collects criminal fines and related costs and certain civil judgments and administrative penalties. The primary means of collecting these judgments is through annual automated attachment of permanent funds dividends. For civil judgments, additional collection actions may be taken, including attachment of bank accounts, garnishment of wages, and judgment debtor exams. With only a few exceptions, all money collected by the Unit is paid to the general fund. Thus, the Unit does not currently track individual payees. In order to add restitution judgments to its caseload, the Unit would need to upgrade its existing computer system, including (1) the purchase of computer hardware with a larger storage capacity to handle the increased caseload, and (2) computer programming to allow the collections database to recognize restitution judgments and track payee information. Likewise, additional personnel would be needed to handle these cases. Depending on the number of judgments transferred to the Unit, the Unit would anticipate the addition of (1) one full-time administrative clerk to handle the data entry, and (2) a full-time associate attorney who would be responsible for obtaining writs of execution, preparing court paperwork for bank sweeps and wage garnishments, responding to inquiries from defendants and victims, and coordinating with administrative services on payment processing. The Department would also anticipate adding one full-time accounting clerk to handle the payment distribution to victims after successful collections.

With some modifications, this database and related collections procedures could be used to collect restitution on behalf of victims. A full narrative of this project is available in the Governor's FY 2002 original request of $250.0 GF for this effort. The additional $56.5 in this increment is for the Legal Secretary II position. When the original operating budget item was being developed, Collections was expecting only a few hundred new cases would result. The increment did not anticipate thousands of new cases that are now expected. The two positions originally envisioned could not handle the volume of correspondence and telephone calls this many new cases will generate, in addition to doing the work necessary to legally process the judgments to collect restitution.

Attorneys working in the Governmental Affairs section are some of the department's most senior and experienced staff. This section handles a wide variety of complex cases including cases dealing with intergovernmental relations, public finance, procurement, elections, and labor relations and employment law. To enable staff attorneys to better manage the more difficult aspects of these cases, paralegal assistance is required. Paralegal assistance will increase efficiency in processing these cases, which often require that numerous witnesses and thousands of documents be organized for the discovery phase of litigation, and ultimately, for trial. These cases also require specialized research on matters such as legislative history, or caselaw from other jurisdiction that can be delegated to a paralegal assistant.
This increment would provide funding in accordance with our FY 2002 timekeeping and billing rate for personal services and overhead costs for an additional Associate Attorney II in the amount of $90.0.

The State is proceeding with its claim regarding the alleged mismanagement by the Bank of America and other affiliated banks serving either as trustee or fiscal paying agency on over 1200 bond issues of state and municipal agencies. Nearly all the participating municipalities, the AHFC and AIDEA have paid their share of the prorated costs. Those funds plus an original general fund appropriation in the amount of $250.0 made in FY 1998 have been virtually exhausted. We anticipate that an additional $250.0 would be needed to pay litigation costs that will arise in FY 2002. This appropriation represents the estimated state share of the total cost of litigation and will be needed to leverage additional funds from the participating public corporations and municipalities.

Child Protection: Focus on Permanency

The department is requesting interagency receipt authority to receive funds from the Department of Health and Social services to make permanent two temporary attorney positions now funded through the Balloon Project. While much more work remains to be done on this important project during FY 2001, the oldest cases are almost all resolved, and a picture of what on-going caseloads will be like absent other significant changes in law or policy is beginning to appear.

The rate of increase in new child-in-need-of-aid (CINA) cases has slowed significantly since the upsurge in 1998. Anchorage Human Services saw a 65 percent increase in new CINA cases between 1997 and 1998. In 1999, the number of new cases increased another 13.9 percent, and in 2000, 2.6 percent. During the first three months of FY 2001, the number of new CINA cases coming into the Anchorage office is already 5 percent more than in FY 2000. While the rate of increase is less, more new cases are still coming in each year. The Balloon Project has been very successful in clearing the backlog of cases involving children in out-of-home care for far too long, and overall, per attorney caseloads are down compared to prior years. However, caseloads are still high, particularly in Anchorage and Bethel, where per attorney caseloads are in excess of 60 cases. National standards suggest a responsible caseload is no more than 40 to 50 active cases.

With the number of new cases continuing to increase, the loss of two positions that focus on permanency for the most difficult children's cases would be costly. These positions allow the remaining attorneys in the section to handle the day-to-day crises associated with new children just entering the system, who have not moved to the point that termination of parental rights is mandated, and meet the statutory deadlines child protection law requires. An analysis of cases opened in October and November 1998 indicates that the deadlines are being met in over 90 percent of the cases. If two attorney positions are lost, it is far less likely that this success rate will continue, to the detriment of the children the deadlines were written to help.

The department is requesting an increment of $137.0 in general funds for the addition of one new juvenile delinquency attorney position in Anchorage. Juvenile delinquency workload in our Anchorage office has increased by 53 percent since FY 98, but the resources to handle the work have not changed. During FY 98, 153 new juvenile delinquency cases were opened in the Anchorage office. In FY 99, 225 new cases were opened, and in FY 00, 233. Meanwhile, only one attorney position in Anchorage Human Services is dedicated to juvenile delinquency work for Anchorage, the Kenai Peninsula, Dillingham, Naknek, and King Salmon. While other attorneys in the section assist, their child protection caseloads do not permit much time be devoted to juvenile delinquency cases. In FY 2000, other attorneys worked less than 6 percent of the 2,059 attorney hours billed for JD work in Anchorage.

In 1998, the court system calculated approximately 17 percent of all the juvenile delinquency cases opened in Anchorage were referred for prosecution by assistant attorneys general. In FY 00, the referral rate was 32 percent. Cases are also taking more attorney and paraprofessional time. More cases are being contested. During this calendar year, 2000, the Anchorage AGO has already had five juvenile delinquency jury trials, and ten more are currently calendared through November. While we do not have an exact count for 1999, this is substantially more trials than occurred last year. The Anchorage attorney indicates she is seeing more cases that involve multiple counts with multiple defendants, which are more complicated, and involve multiple defense attorneys. Yet the state relies on one prosecutor. The Anchorage attorney also says she is getting more sexual assault cases, which are high stakes cases and heavily contested, require expert testimony, and much more preparation.

State government employs the largest number of workers in Alaska; as a result, the workers compensation workload for the Special Litigation section is voluminous. In the past, the section had handled the entire state workers compensation legal defense workload with only two attorneys, and one paralegal assistant. This is no longer possible due to increased briefing demands of legal issues at the hearing and appellate levels; more complicated medical issues to investigate, research, and prepare for hearing; and changes in statutes and regulations which implicate increased attorney time throughout the administrative and appellate process. For example, the passage of SCS HB 419 this last session has resulted in more litigation (and increased attorney workload) over releases to obtain documents and relevant discovery for worker compensation claims. Revision of the Workers Compensation statutes and subsequent Board decisions has increased the number of claims for rate adjustments and the value of such claims. Interpretation of 1998 changes to regulations such as 8 AAC

45.182(e) has also increased the workload concerning penalty and compensation paid.
This increment in the amount of $70,900 in interagency receipts RSA'd from the Department of Administration, Division of Risk Management, funds an additional attorney half-time. These funds are required in FY 2002 in order to keep up with a substantial increase in workload handling the state's workers compensation defense.

The Ted Stevens Anchorage International Airport is undergoing a $200 million expansion and renovation. This construction and renovation project will continue until 2006. This project has already caused an increase in Department of Law billings. Major issues will continue to arise involving construction contracts and claims, the leasing of new spaces to airlines, the doubling of the retail/food service space and the leasing of that space to existing and new concessionaires, the doubling of the parking concession contract, the construction and integration of a new rail facility, and environmental contamination discovered during construction.

The Ted Stevens Anchorage International Airport continues to grow as a major hub for the international transportation of cargo. Over the past 5 years, international wide-body cargo landings have increased by 50%. In addition to a growing number of cargo flights, new cargo handling facilities such as the Williams Lynx project have been developed. The increased flights and new facilities have significantly raised the number and complexity of issues requiring legal assistance, including issues related to leasing, facility financing, and landing fees. The Airport's marketing efforts also have grown more complex as airports in other northern countries compete for the same cargo traffic. An example of the legal work accompanying these efforts is the ongoing attempt to obtain greater federal regulatory flexibility to accommodate foreign air carrier traffic.

Private sector investment at the Ted Stevens Anchorage International Airport under airport lease contracts has exceeded $120 million over the past 5 years. Further private and public sector growth is projected, including a doubling of the capital improvement program (aside from the ongoing terminal redevelopment project) in the next fiscal year, along with the attendant need for legal services. Proposed projects in their early phases include a privately-developed parking garage/rental car facility, a steam heat/electricity co-generation facility, and the creation of new space for airport support services. The parking garage/rental car facility will present legal complexities as it is proposed to be jointly funded by the private and public sectors. The creation of space for airport support services requires the issuance of a federal permit to fill wetlands. Environmental groups recently initiated the first phase of litigation attempting to stop this project. The need for legal services is projected to increase to assist with the transition to an entirely new set of regulations governing activities at the Anchorage and Fairbanks International Airports and a new five-year operating agreement between the Airports and the airlines, both to take effect in 2001. This increment, in the amount of $75,600 in interagency receipts from the International Airports Fund will fund an additional half time attorney to undertake the expanding workload described above.

General funds requested by the Collections unit to address collecting restitution on behalf of victims will be used in part to fund an additional Accounting Clerk II in the Administrative Services Division. Currently, the Administrative Services Division handles refunds for overcollected amounts from criminal fines, cost of appointed council, and cost of incarceration, certain civil judgments and administrative penalties. The additional responsibility to make restitution payments to victims is beyond the current capacity of the Division. This increment in the amount of $43.5 in interagency receipts will fund an Accounting Clerk II to make and track restitution payments.
