Project Description/Justification:

The existing domestic violence shelters in the State of Alaska have extensive capital improvement needs to maintain basic life, health, and safety for staff and clients. Rehabilitation needs at existing shelters continue to increase in number and severity with each passing year. Many programs are operating in old, run-down buildings, are in physical disrepair, and compromise the safety of those who work and stay at the shelters. This project will involve having a contractor visit each shelter and document needed upgrades including, but not limited to, building and fire code issues, roof and window replacements, kitchen upgrades, security cameras and safety upgrades, building upgrades to meet ADA requirements, furniture replacement, and other necessary repairs or renovations.

The Council on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault (CDVSA), in partnership with the Rasmuson Foundation, will oversee assessment surveys at shelter facilities. When the facility surveys are complete, funding will be allocated to specific projects and will be available to eligible safe houses in communities without a shelter as well as traditional shelter facilities.
